Brendan Fitzpatrick is a Senior Director at Keybridge. He specializes in corporate social responsibility ("CSR"), impact evaluation, economic modeling, and environmental policy. For more than a decade, he has served as an evaluator and advisor to nonprofit organizations, industry associations, and private companies on their CSR commitments. Brendan has also led economic modeling projects to estimate the impact of potential energy and environmental policies on the economy and specific industries. Prior to joining Keybridge, Brendan served in the Office of the Chief Economist of the World Bank, where he focused on development finance, aid effectiveness, environment, and the production of the 2006-08 Global Monitoring Reports. He holds Bachelor's degrees in Bioengineering & Economics from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign and a Master's degree in Public Administration in International Development from Harvard's Kennedy School of Government.
