Megan Yeh is an Associate at Keybridge, where she specializes in environmental policy, data analytics, project management, and development economics. Prior to joining Keybridge, she served as a college adviser in a St. Louis public high school, working to increase the number of underrepresented, low-income, and first-generation college students. During graduate school, her research focused on electrification's impact on women in India, air quality in Asian megacities, and the productive use of energy. She holds a Bachelor's degree in History and Anthropology from Washington University in St. Louis and a Master's degree in Public Policy from Duke University.
